Edmontonians watch Liberals crown Trudeau

New leader. Eldest son of former prime minister elected in a landslide victory

A crowd of 100 Edmontonians erupted into applause and cheers late Sunday afternoon as Justin Trudeau was elected to lead the federal Liberal party.

Trudeau, the eldest son of former prime minister Pierre Trudeau, emerged victorious, winning the party's leadership in a landslide victory with more than 80 per cent of the vote.

In Edmonton, politicians and supporters of all ages gathered at Marquee, which was decorated with Canadian flags and white-and-red helium-filled balloons, to watch the election results and the 41-year-old's victory speech.

"His message is one of optimism, of hope, of inclusion, of listening, and I just think Canadians are ready for that," said Anne McLellan, who served four terms as the Liberal member of Parliament for Edmonton Centre.

Raj Sherman, leader of the Alberta Liberal party, attended Sunday's event in Edmonton and said Trudeau's decisive victory is good for Albertans.

"He's come to Alberta so many times in this leadership race. That for me is a very good sign," Sherman said.

Past Edmonton Centre Liberal candidate Mary MacDonald helped organize Sunday's viewing party and said Trudeau is a leader who brings a great deal of excitement to the party.

"He has exhibited a good understanding of what it takes to build a party. He understands the need to work at the grassroots level, to build that up. I think that that bodes well not only for the party here in Alberta but for the party across the country," she said.

Canadians are still two years away from a federal election. Trudeau is expected to encounter his first test on Monday when he directs his first question to the prime minister in the House of Commons.

U of A. Faculty of arts won't close: Dean

The dean of the faculty of arts at the University of Alberta said the department isn't going anywhere.

"I don't think there is any possibility that the faculty of arts is going to be eliminated in these budget cuts," said Lesley Cormack.

"I think that would be quite a bizarre solution because the faculty of arts is one of the biggest and strongest faculties at the University of Alberta."

Cormack's comments come after Donna Wilson, president of the Association of Academic Staff University of Alberta, warned last week of major downsizing at the institution and said entire faculties risk closure.

Wilson singled out the faculty of arts, stating the department was left wondering if they were going to survive in light of radical cuts to post-secondary education.

Cormack said that's simply not the case, noting the faculty of arts has more than 6,000 students and a 96 per cent placement rate of graduates after graduation.

"There is a perception that a BA is not a useful degree, whereas it is an entry into the most exciting jobs you could imagine," said Cormack.

Students enrolled in the institution's arts faculty can earn both majors and minors in a wide range of programs including creative writing, criminology, economics, psychology, drama, religious studies and film studies.

Councillors consider

City councillors will look at two options for bringing people from Jasper Avenue into the river valley, but there are big hurdles standing in the way.

In a report going to council's executive committee Monday, administration recommends paying two companies to further develop their ideas, with even the losing bidder receiving $150,000.

Rob Marchak, the city's director of sustainable development, said it is not unusual for the city to do something like this.

"This is a common tool when you get into situations (like) this and you feel like you need more information," he said.

One of the companies is proposing a gondola system, while the other is looking at both gondola options and a tracked funicular. Both projects would bring people from 104 Street and Jasper Avenue down into the river valley at the Rossdale power plant.

Coun. Kim Krushell said she is a little wary of paying both companies rather than just tendering the project.

"In my mind, I wonder why aren't we just going with one and saving the cash," she said.

Earlier this year, councillors received a report saying repurposing the Rossdale area to a commercial area could cost as much as $90 million, and just stabilizing the buildings on the site would cost $7 million.

Krushell said council is going to have to look at the whole picture.

"We are going to have to look at this within the overall

Civic election. Newcomers gunning for your vote

As the 2013 municipal election campaign gets underway, Metro will provide a weekly roundup of those throwing their hats into the ring.

For the first instalment we highlight the newcomers bidding for council seats.

— Dan St. Pierre is running in Ward 5. He is a former Mercedes salesman, and now a student at Grant MacEwan University.

— Kassie Russell, the current vice-president of operations and finance for the Students Association of MacEwan University, is looking to move from student politics to civic politics, with a bid for Ward 6.

— Heather MacKenzie, a current Edmonton Public School board trustee, is also running in Ward 6. She has been on the school board since 2010.

— Andrew Knack got into the race earlier this year, announcing a bid for Ward 1. He is currently the president of the Meadowlark Community League.

— Michael Walters, a former provincial candidate, announced his plan to run for the Ward 10 council seat earlier this month. Now a consultant, Walters was the director of the community action project.

— Mimi Williams, a frequent critic of the current council, has announced her plans to run in Ward 7. Williams is a writer and local activist.

Lakeland College cutting jobs

A nearly $4-million deficit for the 2013-14 fiscal year has forced Lakeland College to make major cuts to balance its budget.

The college will be eliminating more than 40 permanent positions over the next two years and cutting several programs including paramedic training.

Other cost-saving measures include consolidating departments and no longer operating the daycare centres at two of the college's campuses. METRO

Sixteen local kids got to take a shot at stardom Sunday alongside their hockey idol, Oilers winger Taylor Hall.

After a casting call brought out 200 kids last week, 16 were selected to star alongside

Hall in a Crystal Glass commercial.

Emerson Brent wore his Taylor Hall jersey to the audition and brought it with him after getting the part.

"I brought it and I brought my hat so he could sign them," Brent said.

Being in the commercial was great, he added, but he was really excited to meet Hall.

"Every time we do the group huddle and run, I whisper to him, 'You're awesome,'" he said.

Hall said the commercial was an interesting change of pace.

"I took drama in high school, but since then I haven't done much acting," he said.

Hall said he was floored so many kids came out to audition.

"There is a buzz in this city about the team and the kids certainly love hockey."

Ken Franczek, the company's general manager, said the commercial was a great opportunity to get kids from the community involved.

"The kids are having a blast, the parents are loving it and I think Taylor is having a blast as well."

Liberals have their saviour

Leadership race.

Justin Trudeau seizes victory, but now must deliver on the hype

Justin Trudeau will walk into the House of Commons on Monday as the new leader of the Liberal party — with expectations for him flying as high as his decisive victory in the leadership race.

Trudeau handily won the job that his late father, Pierre Trudeau, held for 16 years in the 20th century. His victory, then, is already historic: A rare family dynasty in the making in Canadian politics.

But the task now facing Trudeau is the more pressing question about the future: Whether he can rebuild the Liberals from their third-place standing back to the powerful political force they once were in Canada.

Before about 1,000 cheering Liberals gathered in Ottawa on Sunday night, Trudeau said that task shouldn't be underestimated.

"Let us be clear-eyed about what we have accomplished. We have worked hard and we have had a great campaign. We are united, hopeful and resolute in our purpose," he said. "But know this: We have won nothing more and nothing less than the opportunity to work even harder."

It's not me; it's you

Trudeau conducted a leadership campaign that attracted nearly viral levels of public attention and crowds of adoring fans: 10,000 volunteers alone and thousands of new party supporters signed up in the past six months.

He served notice that he intends to campaign as Liberal leader in the same way as he campaigned for the job: With optimism rather than negativity, and beyond the nasty, personal partisanship that prevails in Ottawa.

er afterward. His campaign advisers said he intends to spend the next few weeks putting a transition plan in place.

Trudeau said he's ready for the Conservatives' now-familiar brand of attack ads on Liberal leaders.

"The Conservative Party will now do what it does. It will try to spread fear. It will sow cynicism. It will attempt to convince Canadians that we should be satisfied with what we have now," Trudeau said in his acceptance speech.

The New Democrats, keen to keep the Liberals down in third place, will also have Trudeau in their sights as they present themselves as the main progressive opposition to the Conservatives.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Vote count

Landslide victory

Justin Trudeau is the Liberals' undisputed star, sweeping more than 80 per cent of the available points in a final field of six candidates.

Liberal MP Joyce Murray, whose leadership platform included co-operating with New Democrats and Greens to unseat Harper in the next election, finished a very distant second behind Trudeau with 10 per cent of the vote.

Just the prospect of the fluidly bilingual Montreal MP's victory had already boosted the Liberals back into contention in public-opinion surveys. They are now running even with or ahead of the ruling Conservatives.

The Conservative party immediately put out a release congratulating Trudeau on his leadership win and then slamming his inexperience.

Rehtaeh Parsons' death must bring change: Protesters

More than 100 people showed up for a protest, including mother Leah Parsons, second from left, on Sunday. JEFF HARPER/METRO

Local residents and members of an international hacktivist group called for justice and social change during a protest in honour of a Cole Harbour teen who took her own life.

"There's a responsibility by the public in the way kids are brought up," said a masked member of Anonymous on Sunday, referring to the four boys who allegedly raped Rehtaeh Parsons when she was 15.

"But there's also a responsibility by the judicial system to act when there's a problem and do a thorough investigation, which is not what happened here."

About 100 people joined the protest outside Halifax police headquarters Sunday.

"We urge the RCMP to ... send a very clear message that this behaviour will not be tolerated," said one protester, Dave, as the crowd cheered.

Kim Wall, 45, said it's time for parents and other adults to start teaching young boys and men responsibility for their own behaviour.

"I'm really tired of phrases like 'Boys will be boys,'" she said, after sharing several personal anecdotes of sexual violence.

"It is time that we start teaching our sons respect so that we're not all teaching our daughters to protect themselves against those sons."

In Toronto, a small group held a candlelight vigil at Dundas Square. The participants included victims of sexual violence and a man whose daughter was recently murdered by her ex-boyfriend. They called for change in the way rape and domestic violence are treated

7-year break on gun licence fees to end

The Conservative government is ending a seven-year waiver on gun licence renewal fees next month in an effort to collect about $18 million annually from firearms owners.

The changes were quietly posted in the Canada Gazette on the weekend that restore the $60 licence fee for non-restricted weapons.

Two other measures will be extended by one year: Gun owners who let their possession-only licences expire will still be allowed to re-apply without having to pay to go through a safety course; as will an amnesty on criminal charges for failing to license or register non-restricted weapons for people "who were taking steps to comply."

women were 25 per cent more likely to get sub-optimal care.

Nearly half of the women in their first year of treatment hadn't been tested to see if they'd be resistant to the drugs, compared to 36 per cent of cases among men. The study also found that women were given drug regimens that were not recommended for their particular cases nearly twice as often as men. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Russian officials are concerned that polar-bear poachers in their country are using Canadian documents to disguise illegally hunted pelts.

Nikita Ovsyanikov, one of Russia's top polar-bear scientists, claims that Canadian documents required to bring

16 killed. Assault most serious in Mogadishu since al-Shabab was forced out of the capital in August 2011

Declining influence

Al-Shabab controls far less territory today and its influence appears to be on the decline.

- Al-Shabab ruled Mogadishu from 2006 until 2011, when African Union and Somali forces pushed them out of the city. Since then the al-Shabab extremists have launched suicide bombings on the capital city every few weeks.

A barrage of bullets and two car-bomb blasts rattled Mogadishu on Sunday when nine al-Shabab Islamic extremists stormed Somalia's main court complex, officials said, in a two-hour attack that shows the country's most dangerous militant group may be down but not defeated.

A preliminary death toll stood at 16, including all nine attackers. Six of the attackers detonated suicide vests and three others were shot and killed during the assault.

The attack on the Supreme Court complex began at around 12:30 p.m., sparking running battles with police and army forces. One car bomb detonated outside the court. The militants took an unknown number of hostages during the siege. Many other government workers and civilians in the court complex hid while fearing for their lives. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Syria crisis. Activists say regime airstrikes kill 25, including 12 children

Syrian government warplanes carried out airstrikes on a rebellious neighbourhood in the capital and a village in the country's north-east on Sunday, killing at least 25 people, including a dozen children, activists said.

With its ground forces stretched thin, President Bashar Assad's regime has relied heavily on its fighter jets and helicopters to try to stem rebel advances in the country's civil war. The air raids frequently hit civilian areas, drawing criticism from the international community.

A Human Rights Watch report last week accused the Syrian government of committing war crimes by using indiscriminate and sometimes deliberate airstrikes against civilians, killing at least 4,300 people since the summer.

1 dead, 1 missing in pair of avalanches

Washington state.

Woman dies after 25 rescuers take 5-6 hours bringing her off mountain where she was buried in snow

A woman who had been buried in 1.5 metres of snow has died, and one man was still missing Sunday morning after a pair of spring avalanches struck separate groups hiking in the mountains east of Seattle, authorities in Washington state said.

Sgt. Katie Larson, with the King County Sheriff's Office, said a team of rescuers worked through the night in blizzard-like conditions to carry the female snowshoer off the mountain just after midnight.

She was not moving and had been in and out of consciousness. Medics confirmed that she had died when they reached the base of the mountain, Larson said.

"The conditions yesterday were horrific," Larson said Sunday. "It took 25 rescuers about five to six hours" to bring her off the mountain.

The woman, whose identity was not known, had been hiking with her dog near a group of a dozen other people Saturday afternoon when an avalanche hit Red Mountain near Snoqualmie Pass.

She had been buried but was dug out with the help of a group of a dozen snowshoers, who had also been caught in the avalanche.

Meanwhile, the search for a 60-year-old hiker who was swept down the mountain in a separate avalanche on Saturday was suspended indefinitely due to the poor weather conditions.

avalanche carried them more than 365 metres down the mountain.

A tour bus carrying visitors from Yosemite National Park was travelling at an unsafe speed when the driver lost control and crashed on a mountain road, leaving 16 people injured, the California Highway Patrol said Sunday.

The bus was about nine kilometres outside the park when it went off Highway 41, a winding mountain road, and crashed about 6 p.m. Saturday. It came to a stop when it hit a tree, CHP Officer Scott Jobinger said.

Fifteen passengers and a tour guide suffered minor to moderate injuries.

"At this point the cause was the bus was travelling at unsafe speed and went off the road," Jobinger said.

CHP Sgt. Edward Green said the impact of the crash caused several passengers to be thrown to the driver's side of the bus, with the bus stopping when it hit the tree.

"If the tree wasn't there to stop the bus, it would have continued down the ravine," Greene said.

The 15 injured passengers, described as mostly elderly, and a tour guide were taken to local hospitals for treatment. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

On the march for democracy in Spain

Thousands of people demonstrated against the Spanish monarchy Sunday to demand the return of a democratically elected head of state — another blow for embattled King Juan Carlos. The marchers thronged a central square in Madrid on the 82nd anniversary of the establishment of Spain's last democratically elected republic, which was overthrown by an army uprising that led to a civil war and the dictatorship of Gen. Francisco Franco. The monarchy's popularity has slumped in recent months, with the 75-year-old king being criticized for going on a luxurious safari during Spain's financial crisis and a corruption scandal with links to royal family members. ANDRES KUDACKI/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Death toll rises to 13 in China bird-flu outbreak

New strain. Head of WHO's China office says he expects more cases of H7N9 virus

Two more people have died in China from a new strain of bird flu, raising the death toll from the virus to 13, state media reported Sunday.

The official Xinhua News Agency said the two deaths were reported in Shanghai and that three new cases were also confirmed in the financial hub. A total of 11 new cases were reported Sunday — including two in a central province that previously had been unaffected. In all, 60 cases of the virus, known as H7N9, have been reported in China.

The two cases reported Sunday followed an announcement Saturday that a seven-year-old girl had become the first person in the capital to be infected with the virus.

A World Health Organization official said Sunday that it wasn't surprising that the virus had spread to Beijing. Michael O'Leary, head of WHO's office in China, said it's not the case that everyone confirmed to be infected was "clustered in one small area."

"We still expect that there will be other cases," he said.

Shelve your emotions, know your limits

Offer time. Don't let outside factors affect your judgment, define your 'walk away' point

LESLEY SCORGIE
For Metro

After house hunting for a while, you think you have found "the one." Now it's time to make an offer.

For many people, buying their first home will be the largest financial transaction they have ever made. As such, it comes with both excitement and nervousness, which can affect a buyer's judgment.

The biggest favour you can do yourself throughout the offer process is to shelve your emotions and know your limits — what you can afford and the conditions you want met for the sale to go through. Once you have clearly defined your "walk away" point, you are in an ideal position to place an offer.

In many cases, your initial multiple offers pushes the price up and forces buyers into removing their conditions prematurely. Rather than overpay, consider waiting to buy or select a different property.

offer to purchase is simply a starting point for negotiating. Often, the seller will counteroffer, which means they will ask for certain aspects of your initial offer to be amended, like price, possession date, included fixtures and various conditions. Buyers and sellers can continue to swap offers and counteroffers until they have reached agreement or choose to walk away from the deal.

Buyers can protect themselves by including "conditions" that must be met, within a specified period of time from when the offer is accepted for the sale to go through. Some of the most common conditions are financing approval for the buyer, a healthy home inspection, review of the property's title and liens associated with it, approval of home insurance, a satisfactory property condition report (where defects are disclosed), and review of the condominium association rules, bylaws, amendments, and meeting minutes.

If key conditions aren't met, you can walk away from the deal. But if they are, your offer becomes firm and final.

Once an offer is finalized, the buyer's deposit cheque is cashed. Deposits are generally a minimum of $5,000, though this amount can be negotiated.

By conducting thorough research or hiring a reputable realtor, you will better understand the appropriate conditions for your offer, what an ideal offer should look like, and when to persist or walk away from the deal.

Closing the deal. Know the hidden costs

Your offer has been accepted and home ownership is right around the corner.

To finalize your home purchase you will have to hire a lawyer/notary to process the deal.

To protect you, a lawyer/notary's primary purpose is to review all contracts before they are signed — most important is the offer to purchase. The lawyer/notary safeguards your legal interests by ensuring the property doesn't have any liens, work orders or charges against it. They are also responsible for preparing all legal and mortgage documentation, managing disbursements, ensuring the land/property title is transferred correctly, arranging insurance and scrutinmovers, changing locks, professional cleaning, buying furniture, tools and appliances.

On top of explaining their own fee for service, a good lawyer/notary will clearly communicate other "hidden costs" associated with purchasing a home.

Some of the most common costs are described below:

- The land transfer tax is likely the most expensive aspect of closing costs for a resale home, which is typically less than two per cent of the value of the property.

- Closing adjustments are property expenses that sellers have paid and need to be reimbursed for utilities such as heating or water, municipal property tax, and condo or maintenance fees.

- Appraisal fees typically range in between $150 to $300. However, if a mortgage is insured through the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, Genworth or Canada Guarantee, the fees are generally waived.

- Interest adjustments, home inspections, insurance, Estoppel certificate (for condominiums), and title insurance.

Prior to making an offer many experts recommend that buyers set aside anywhere from $1,000 to $3,000 for closing fees.

When searching for a lawyer/notary, your province's law association will provide a list of those who specialize in real estate law. Hire someone who is licensed, works in the area in which you are buying, has reasonable fees, can clearly communicate with you and, if you are buying a condominium, they should be familiar with condominium transactions.

Copyright collective to battle universities

Whose lines are they anyway? Expert says legal action intended to 'scare' schools into relicensing

There's a battle brewing in Canadian academia.

On one side stands Access Copyright, a collective that has provided institutions access to a pool of protected intellectual work for more than two decades while distributing royalties to the writers, artists and publishers it represents.

On the other is a group of universities that no longer feel the need to pay for the services offered by the collective, opting instead to navigate the world of intellectual-property rights without a middle agent.

Tensions are threatening to boil over as Access Copyright takes one of Canada's largest universities to court, a move some see as a warning to others who have ended relations with the agency.

Access Copyright is claiming Toronto's York University, which opted out of an agreement with the collective, has improperly been reproducing and authorizing the copying of protected works.

The issue goes beyond a single institution. Access Copyright has also filed two applications to the Copyright Board of Canada requesting tariffs that would require schools and universities that don't have an agreement with Access Copyright to pay to use works the agency handles the rights for.

Institutions wouldn't have to pay the tariff if they have direct licence agreements with publishers, use openly accessible work or copy a portion of a work small enough to be considered "fair dealing."

The situation could have wide-ranging implications.

"At the end of the day, if Access Copyright is successful — although I have to say that ... seems unlikely — we're talking about millions and millions of dollars being paid by taxpayers to this group," said Michael Geist, an expert on intellectual property. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Porter. Fewer hurdles expected for Toronto island airport's new jets

Porter Airlines' expansion plans may be headed for months of turbulence, but not the fierce opposition it faced a decade ago to change at the waterfront airport, a political observer says.

On Wednesday, the airline announced it had placed a conditional order for 12 Bombardier CS100 jets, with 18 options worth about $2.11 billion, allowing it to fly to Los Angeles, Florida, Calgary and the Caribbean from Toronto.

The plan stirred vocal opposition from local leaders. But University of Toronto assistant professor Zack Taylor said this time, the airline's success may blunt some of the outcry.

"This airport is a lot less threatening to people than it used to be," said Taylor, whose focus is on local politics. He said people have become used to the service, except perhaps island residents and those in nearby condos. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada Revenue Agency

Tax-haven lists prompt disclosures

Minister Gail Shea
THE CANADIAN PRESS

Wealthy Canadians with money stashed overseas have come forward in droves to confess their misdeeds after secret lists began circulating with the names of people apparently evading taxes in foreign banking havens.

The Canada Revenue Agency has seen the number of voluntary disclosures of foreign, unreported income rise dramatically since 2007, when it received the first such list from Liechtenstein naming 106 Canadians with accounts in secretive banks there.

The agency in 2010 received another list from the French government with information about more than 1,000 Swiss accounts at HSBC Private Bank (Swiss) SA, all linked to Canadian taxpayers.

And Revenue Minister Gail Shea is pursuing yet another massive list, acquired recently by the CBC, that the public broadcaster says contains the names of 450 Canadians with money in foreign tax havens.

The agency's voluntary disclosures program encourages taxpayers who have deliberately or inadvertently failed to pay their taxes to come forward. If the disclosure is accepted, penalties are waived and no legal action is taken, as long as back taxes are paid.

The program has seen a spike in disclosures of offshore accounts since 2007, to a record 4,064 in 2011-12 — more than double the level three years earlier.

Depositing funds in a foreign tax haven is not against the law in Canada, but failing to report any income related to such accounts is.

Redline sees growth in 'digital oilfields'

New type of network.

The 150-employee company's HQ is in Markham, Ont., north of Toronto

Redline Communications is aiming to be a pioneer in the "digital oilfield."

The company provides oil and gas producers with a secure, high-capacity wireless communication network to monitor their operations in harsh or remote areas.

Last year, half of Redline's revenues of $50 million US came from the oil and gas industry.

Redline CEO Eric Melka says a digital connection to an oilfield allows a company to remotely monitor and manage it in real time.

For example, Redline can build a network in an oilfield that can handle calls between staff, transfer files and share data as well as monitor drilling and production and do video surveillance.

Melka, who has been restructuring and refocusing Redline over the past three years, notes that oilfields are too big and remote to monitor by cellphone or a short-range Wi-Fi network.

Redline Communications Group Inc. had its contract expanded last year for the Shell Oil joint-venture petrol-

Research note

Company good target for takeover by big players

Technology analyst Noel Atkinson of Loewen, Ondaatje, McCutcheon USA Ltd. noted that Redline has strong demand from the oil and gas industry.

"We believe Redline is the early leader worldwide in this segment, which could represent a market opportunity in excess of $3 billion," Atkinson said in a recent note.

But Atkinson said Redline's radios last for years and, while their reliability wins orders, this has also limited the revenue stream to replace them.

Stifel Nicolaus analyst

Blair Abernethy said Redline's small size relative to competitors could make it a takeover target.

"Longer term, given Redline's relatively small size, advanced and flexible core technology and market focus, we see the company as a potential take-out candidate for larger communications equipment and oilfield technology providers," Abernethy said in a research note.

REDEVELOPMENT A CAPITAL MESS

I am on Capital Boulevard five days a week. Some months ago, I wrote a column about how great it was going to look when it was done. As I recall, the city's portion of the redevelopment was supposed to have been finished last September. But apparently that date was based on the flexible and imaginary timelines that were also used for the repairs on Jasper Avenue. Heaven only knows when the work will actually be completed. But there are bigger problems with the project to deal with.

Unless you happen to have been in the area, you probably haven't seen what changes are being made. One of them is to use paving stones to replace the asphalt.

Based on what I have seen elsewhere in the city where they have been incorporated into the streetscape, the only advantage I can see to using them is that they create ongoing make-work projects. The same freeze-and-thaw cycle that

URBAN COMPASS
Terence Harding
edmonton@metronews.ca

wrecks havoc with our roads has much the same effect on the paving stones. Every year sections of them have to either be reset or replaced. Our city planners are seemingly not too worried about that because they think that what works in California and similar climates should work here.

Another thing I wondered about was the lack of curbs. Instead there are granite posts to demarcate the road and the sidewalk.

I had to wonder if that was going to work very well. Sure enough, a few days after they were installed a car had already hit one of them and almost knocked it over. Several others soon suffered the same fate.

Apparently this travesty of design and planning has recently come to the attention of our Will-Or-Won't-He-Run-Again mayor. He is shocked, stunned and dismayed that the planning branch would approve something so uncreative and unsustainable.

This spectacular waterfall is a shot from the Neon Luminance series — a collection of photographs using similar techniques. Produced by two young California-based photographers, the series brings the local forest areas to life with creative lighting.

Their method relies on long exposures (seven minutes) and dropping glow sticks into the water at strategic points, in some cases tying several together. METRO

Best falls in California

- Yosemite Falls. One of the tallest known falls with a total drop of 2,425 feet — it forms one of the main attractions at Yosemite National Park.
- Vernal Fall. A popular but deadly 200-foot fall, famously powerful, the Vernal causes a startling number of deaths as visitors stray too close.
- Horsetail Fall. Another fall situated in Yosemite National Park, it is a well-trafficked hiking route. Often referred to as “firefall” as it glows red in early spring.

If you thought that fiasco was bad ...

Apparently council doesn't actually approve design concepts. It leaves it up to the supposed expertise of the branch. That is the same branch that gave us the mess called South Edmonton Common and similar fiascos.

Apparently council doesn't actually approve design concepts. It leaves it up to the supposed expertise of the branch. That is the same branch that gave us the mess called South Edmonton Common and similar fiascos.

Here's a thought — if the mayor had actually walked over and taken a look at what was going on Capital Boulevard, he might have spotted the problem much earlier. Making changes now will only drive up costs. Perhaps when it comes to "Make Something Edmonton" we should actually try to make it a city that works properly.

Letters

As a reporter in the Canadian media please take some responsibility in covering issues that affect the daily lives of Canadians.

As I'm sure you are aware, 54,500 Canadians lost their jobs in March, and the government's budget cuts are going to make it harder for Canadians to find work. Finance Minister Flaherty promised the cuts wouldn't affect Canadians, but independent research shows that Human Resources and Skills Development will lose nearly a third of its workforce at a time when Canadians most need training and jobs.

If our government thinks they can hide their plans from public scrutiny they will be more likely to do things that Canadians don't want.

When Prime Minister Harper ran for office in 2006, he promised to clean up Ottawa. He created the Parliamentary Budget Office so Canadians would know what our government is doing with our money. From F-35s to prisons, Kevin Page, our first federal budget watchdog, showed that he could hold government accountable for fiscal mismanagement. But Harper let Kevin Page's term expire just before his government released this secretive and misleading budget, and the entire process to replace him is veiled in secrecy.

Places are popular for a reason. The problem with tourism isn't the places you're going to, it's the way that tourism is conducted. The more people that travel to a place, the more it becomes commodified, which leads to it being more expensive, controlled and cynical. The places are still amazing — the Roman Colosseum, for example — but if you go to the coliseum in Tunisia, where Gladiator was filmed, it's just as incredible a monument, but there's less tourists, there's not a subway stop there — it's a different experience.

Most of the adventuring

you describe in the book, you didn't do alone. But what if you go to a place where you have no connections? How would you navigate a city solo?

I run into a bunch of great characters while travelling and I love writing them, but I would say two-thirds of the time I'm alone. If you're on the backpacker trail, it's easy to find people to go around with. One of the tricks I always used is that in every hostel or backpacker bar, there's always an extrovert. Sometimes they're fun, sometimes they're jerks, but always attach yourself to that person for two reasons. One, that person always talks to the locals; two, that person almost never has any actual ideas, they just get into things. That's one of the ways to do it. Getting invested in a subculture is another. Start forming a network. It's so easy to do with the Internet. Mine happened to be urban exploration, but it could be anything.

In terms of safety and legality, do you have advice for people who might be inspired after reading your book to go, say, climb a pyramid?

- I'm always a proponent of going where you want to go, doing what you want to do. I never worry about getting hurt or dying. I'm never stressed about the danger part, because I'm a good climber, I know how subway tunnels work and how to not get hit. But I'm always terrified of getting caught. It's more random, and you have less control over it. Everybody has their own risk tolerance. The key is to know what yours is and push it a little bit.

Time to ditch weekly TV release, says scribe

Subscriber television.

House of Cards writer says it's time to rethink the way people consume and view television

It's time to rethink the way TV shows are released to the small screen, says House of Cards writer Beau Willimon.

Voracious viewers increasingly refuse to be bound to the TV schedule, so why not give them what they want when possible, says the Oscar-nominated scribe, who co-wrote the George Clooney film Ides of March.

Netflix released the entire first season of Willimon's political drama on its streaming service earlier this year and plans to do the same with the upcoming horror Hemlock Grove and rebooted comedy Arrested Development.

"There's no reason for shows to be done week-to-week anymore," Willimon says in a recent interview from Costa Mesa, Calif.

"That harkens back to the days of live television when the cameras had to roll at a certain night at a certain time

New way to watch

and it was being broadcast live. And then you move to shows being pre-taped with live studio audiences ... and people were conditioned for a certain night and a certain time and that's how you sold advertising."

Subscription-fuelled networks including HBO, The Movie Network and Movie Central make their money by signing up viewers, rather than advertising. They would be best primed to shift to the all-at-once release, he says.

"There's absolutely no reason to do a week-to-week release with that model. The only argument to be made is that there is a marketing strategy in which over 10 weeks you're able to build a sort of slow burn marketing campaign and the show remains relevant in the press for a 10-week period," he says.

"But we didn't do that and I'm still on the phone with (press) eight weeks after we launched all 13 of our episodes. So I can make the argument that there's ways to stay relevant for just as long as a show that's doing it week-to-week."

And because Netflix ordered two seasons of House of Cards when it bought the series, Willimon could map out storylines in season one that might not pay off until late in season two.

"You have a much broader canvas to work with and you're not playing the ratings game week-to-week early on in your first season," he said.

A bad show and a fresh start for the New Kids

New tour.

Jonathan Knight explains what happened when he walked out in the middle of a recent performance

New Kids on the Block member Joey McIntyre says a recent show to promote their upcoming arena tour wasn't their "finest moment."

But he says it's also not indicative of the upcoming stadium performances that will bring them to Canada in June and July. At a recent New York concert, band member Jonathan Knight suddenly walked off stage mid-show, never to return.

During a visit to Toronto, Knight admits he's long battled anxiety issues and that it continues to dog him today.

But he says it's not as serious as it once was, insisting the New York meltdown had more to do with lack of sleep and problems with his "day job" as a real estate broker. It's a career he started when he retreated from the limelight after the group disbanded in 1994.

McIntyre, Knight and fellow members Jordan Knight and Danny Wood were in Toronto to promote their new album 10 and an upcoming tour with Boyz II Men and 98 Degrees. A publi-

"It's not as much of an issue as it was. That was just a bad week. A bad week. I didn't sleep and just was like aggravated with stuff going on back at work. It just built up and that was it," Knight said.

McIntyre agreed it wasn't a good time.

"That show wasn't our finest moment. Aside from whatever Jon was experiencing, sometimes we wing it and sometimes we have fun and that's OK but we winged the hell out of that show. And it didn't have a structure and a form and so I really don't think Jon would have done that in an arena show or, you know, in a lot of other shows," McIntyre said. Travel tidbit

Power down?

IT'S ALL RELATIVE
Kathy Buckworth,
kathybuckworth.com

A tablet or large screen smartphone is an amazing entertainment and distraction tool when travelling with children, particularly on crowded airplanes, where the "parenting in public" challenges are magnified due to the enclosed space and normally short tempers of the surrounding travellers.

Most planes and some airports still don't have WiFi, so take the time to download games before you leave.

It's also important to remember that all electronics have to be powered down prior to take off and landing, and in some cases this can be half an hour or more. Thirty minutes in "toddler time" is a long time. Don't rely entirely on electronic diversions for the kids, or yourselves.

Take age appropriate reading materials, activities and toys to fill the time. Snacks are a great distraction also, and as there can be unexpected delays, relying on buying food for a hungry little mouth while on board can be risky. Finger foods such as cereal, dried fruit and cut up vegetables can provide tactile and nutritious ways to pass the time.

One final thought: allowing your child to pass the time by practising their soccer kicks on the seat in front of them is not an option. KATHY BUCKWORTH IS AN AWARD WINNING WRITER. VISIT KATHYBUCKWORTH.COM OR FOLLOW KATHY ON TWITTER @KATHYBUCKWORTH.

Julia Sweeney goes from It's Pat to adventures in motherhood

New book. The former SNL star shares her insight into being a mom to an adopted child in If It's Not One Thing, It's Your Mother

JANE BORDEN
Metro World News in New York

Julia Sweeney titled her new memoir after a pillow embroidered with If It's Not One Thing, It's Your Mother, given to her by her mom that she hated until she had a daughter — who now dislikes the pillow herself.

The former Saturday Night Live (It's Pat!) and Broadway (God Said 'Ha!') star writes about her long path to a nontraditional family with insight and warmth.

Also, refreshingly candid humour: She received her adopted child, Mulan, in China, from a man who entered a crowded ballroom holding the baby aloft in the air, while a muzak version of Celine Dion's My Heart Will Go On played from a boom box.

In her new book, Julia Sweeney writes about, among other things, adopting her daughter. GETTY IMAGES

That must've been an overwhelming and complicated moment. Did you even register the humour of it at the time?

Yes! I was so fixated on it that I missed some of the emotional moment. And that, I would say, is something I do.

You write about investigating your genealogy. How has adopting a child affected your thoughts about it?

I've been in conferences about it and they say, "In this room of 300 people, if you go back five generations, you'll have one person in common with all of you." You're related to everyone. It's terribly meaningful. And also completely meaningless. When I adopted Mulan, I felt like I had to not care about my family history. But then I realized I do care.

I just took my niece and nephew to the cemetery and said, "This is your great grandfather." Mulan added, "And my great grandfather." I replied, "Yes!" But then I thought, "Is it?" It's a grey area.

How does Mulan feel about being in your book?

Right now she likes it, but if we butt heads, she'll say, "And I will resent you for the rest of my days because you wrote that book."

Because of the book, does Mulan like the pillow more?

No! She still hates it. And I just looked at it and thought, I should put it in the next bag to Goodwill. Then I remembered, "Oh no, but it's the pillow! I've infused it with all this meaning now. I guess I have to keep it."

New research

Kids say the darndest things

Children learn to swear before they have mastered the alphabet, according to research from scientists in California.

But they are only following the example of adults, said Dr. Melissa Mohr of the University of Stanford.

English language speakers use a swear word for every 140 words they speak — or 0.7 per cent of the time — her research found. And that's why most children know a profanity by the age of one or two. Although, said Dr. Mohr, the level of juvenile swearing really takes off at the age of three and four.

Her book, *Holy Sh*t: A Brief History of Swearing*, says the upper classes are just as likely to swear as anyone else, although those identifying as middle class are less likely to.

3 TIPS

Spring bites: Grilled Lamb with Artichoke Lemon Sauce

1. Set aside 1 tsp of chopped rosemary. In wide, shallow bowl combine remaining rosemary, garlic, 1/2 tsp salt and 1 tbsp olive oil. Add lamb and coat well on all sides with herb mix. Cover and chill for at least 1 hour, and up to overnight.

2. Set oven rack 4 inches from broiler heating element. Heat oven to broil.

3. In bowl, toss artichokes with remaining 2 tsp oil and salt and pepper to taste. Arrange artichokes in single layer on rimmed baking sheet. Broil, turning several times, until golden around the edges, about 4 mins. Remove pan from the broiler and set aside.

4. In saucepan over medium, heat chicken broth until simmering. In bowl whisk egg yolk, lemon juice, reserved tsp rosemary and cornstarch. Add a little chicken stock to mix in stream, whisking. Add egg mix back to chicken stock and cook 1 min. Season with salt and pepper, then stir in artichokes. Keep warm over low heat.

5. Heat grill or a grill pan over medium-high heat. Wipe off most herb mix from lamb and spray meat with olive oil cooking spray. Add lamb to grill pan. Reduce heat to medium and cook, turning once, about 4 mins. per side for medium-rare. Transfer lamb to plate, cover loosely with foil; let rest

Ingredients

- 3 tbsp finely chopped fresh rosemary leaves, divided
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- Kosher salt
- 1 tbsp plus 2 tsp extra-virgin olive oil, divided
- 1 lb lamb steaks cut from leg
- 1 cup artichoke hearts, patted dry and chopped (frozen is best)
- Black pepper
- 1 cup low-sodium chicken broth
- 1 large egg yolk
- 1 tbsp fresh lemon juice
- 1 tbsp cornstarch

5 mins.

6. Slice lamb against grain into slices about 1/4-inch thick. Add lamb juices from plate to artichoke lemon sauce. Divide lamb between 4 plates and spoon sauce over each. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/SARA MOULTON, AUTHOR OF SARA MOULTON'S EVERYDAY FAMILY DINNERS.

Dinner. Rosemary Lamb Tagine with Chickpeas

This recipe serves eight. MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ingredients

- 2 tbsp olive oil
- 1 large yellow onion, diced
- 1 head garlic, minced
- 2 lbs lamb leg or stew meat, trimmed of fat and cut into 1-inch pieces
- 2 tbsp chopped fresh rosemary
- 15-oz can chopped or diced tomatoes
- 15-oz can chickpeas, drained
- 3/4 cup chicken broth
- Salt and ground black pepper
- 1 lemon, cut into wedges
- Chopped fresh parsley, to garnish
- Plain Greek yogurt, to serve

1. In the base of a tagine or large Dutch oven over medium-high, heat the oil. Add the onion and garlic, then sauté until tender and lightly browned, about 2 to 3 minutes. Add the lamb and brown on all sides, about 15 minutes.

2. Stir in the rosemary, tomatoes, chickpeas and broth, then bring to a simmer. Cover, reduce heat to maintain a bare simmer and let cook for 2 hours, or until the lamb is fork tender.

3. Season with salt and pepper, then divide between serving plates. Squeeze 1 or 2 lemon wedges over each serving, then top with parsley and a dollop of yogurt.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

One of the original slow cookers — the tagine.

At heart, these conical cooking pots from Morocco are similar to a Dutch oven, at least in terms of how they are intended to be used. The base is shallow, similar to a sauté pan. This is topped with a cone-shaped lid. The base is heated directly on the stove, giving the cook not only the ability to sear meat, but also to finely tune the temperature.

Many tagines are ceramic, but some are cast iron.

Once the ingredients are seared and liquid is added, the lid is placed on the base, the heat is adjusted to maintain a simmer and the cook can walk away. The shape of the lid is designed to allow steam to gather and condense at the top, then drip back down into the food.

The result is near flawless slow cooking that results in moist, tender meats.

Skills that set you up for any setting

You want 'em? I got 'em! Today's top transferable talents every employee should perfect

VAN BUUREN
CareerBear.com

Chances are, you'll make between five and eight career changes before you retire — and according to Stefan Danis, CEO of Mandrake and NEXCareer, it will be your transferable skills that will net you the next job.

"In fact," says Danis, "unless you work in a highly specialized area, having these generic skills may be the difference between getting a job or promotion, or not."

Simply put, transferable skills are the versatile skills — sometimes thought of as "soft skills" — that will serve you well in many different roles. You learned these skills at school, through social interactions, playing sports and just plain living. Here are the transferable skills Danis looks for:

Emotional intelligence

EI is the ability to relate to people. It includes skills such as empathy, participation, collaboration, communication and negotiation. Being able to perceive, control and evaluate emotions is important in certain job functions. "I think EI and interpersonal skills are increasingly a focus in school because today the workplace is more about teamwork than ever before."

Resiliency quotient

You don't control many workplace changes, but you do control how you respond to these

Eager to learn? Organizations of today want people who are empathetic and work well in a team environment. ISTOCK changes. "The change gets communicated and then there's that time delay between the communication and your buy-in ... how much time that takes is determined by how resilient you are," says Danis. People with a high resiliency quotient are flexible, adaptable and can multi-task. "Unfortunately, many people are change-adverse. They don't react well and get stuck when their jobs or agenda change. They can emit toxicity that employers want to avoid."

Leadership skills

Although teamwork is the corporate play of choice these days, someone needs to be accountable for getting a project done, says Danis. "Having leadership skills means you have the ability to engage individuals and lead projects." It also means you are industrious and a self-starter, and have initiative. "Since more than one quarter of employees don't perform well managing others, employers are looking for leadership skills when they are promoting from within. In order to lead effectively, you need willing followers."

Analytical skills

This is your willingness to look at the details of a situation from all angles and put together a response to what you see. "Rather than get overwhelmed or miss patterns of what's in front of them, someone with strong analytical skills can make sense of what appears complex. There may be numerous approaches and usually there is one better answer for an organization. If you have strong analytical skills you'll get to that answer quickly," Danis says.

Multicultural sensitivity

"Canadian workforces are increasingly multicultural — in Toronto, 54 per cent of the population is a visible minority — so someone who has what I call 'multicultural sensitivity' is a huge corporate asset." Comparable to the need for gender awareness in the workplace 10 or 20 years ago, having no cultural barriers in the way you think is highly prized, particularly if you're working in an area that involves customer service, sales and human resources, says Danis. "It's about having a more holistic perspective about different points of view, and empathy about how one thinks culturally."

Being organized

Being organized is important because life is so complex with so many distractions. "You're able to get organized, imple-

Plan to keep your home safe and dry

Property. IBC estimates insurance industry paid $1.7B in water damage claims in recent years

While fresh, abundant water is an important resource in our lives, Insurance Bureau of Canada (IBC) reminds Canadians that water damage to your property can result in expensive repair bills and ruin priceless valuables. Fortunately, there are steps you can take to protect your home and your property.

"Based on estimates, the Canadian insurance industry paid $1.7 billion in claims in recent years due to water damage," says Ralph Palumbo, vice-president, Ontario, IBC. "That's a staggering figure, but with a little planning you can ensure that you and your family protect health and home."

Here are some focused activities that will help prevent water damage:

Inside your home

- Install backwater valves or plugs for drains, toilets and other sewer connections.

- Move valuable items to upper floors from the basement.
- Prepare a detailed home inventory. This will help you and your insurer keep track of your valuables in the event of a loss.
- Use water-resistant building materials below ground level.

Outside your home

- Ensure proper lot grading. If possible, build up the ground around your house so water can drain away from your basement walls.
- Clear snow about three to five feet away from the house foundation to prevent leaks.
- Check sidewalks, patios, decks and driveways to make sure they haven't settled over time and are causing water to drain toward your house.
- Keep water out of window sills.
- Make sure downspouts extend at least six feet from your basement wall. Water should drain away from your house and neighbouring homes toward the street, backyard or back lane.

- Clear your eavestroughs of debris and, if possible, help clear catch basins near your home.
- Use a rain barrel to catch water runoff from downspouts.

Insurance coverage

- Talk to your insurance representative to make sure you have appropriate coverage.
- Sudden and accidental bursting of plumbing pipes and appliances is covered by all residential policies. However, damage may not be covered when freezing causes the escape of water.
- Water damage in a basement due to a sewer backup is only covered if specific sewer backup coverage has been purchased.
- In certain circumstances, homeowners who are unable to return home due to insurable damage are entitled to additional living expenses.

Precautions. Your home is a valuable asset

With spring underway, it's a time when many Canadians start looking for a new home or thinking about renovations. Either way, it's an ideal time to start thinking about home insurance.

"Your home is your most valuable asset. With severe weather on the rise, it is more critical than ever to ensure that your home is properly protected," says Ralph Palumbo, vice-president, Ontario, Insurance Bureau of Canada (IBC). "If your home is ever damaged or destroyed, it's very important that it is insured to its accurate replacement value. Taking a few insurance precautions now can help get you through a very hectic time if you do need to make a claim."

The IBC recommends:

- Whenever you increase the value of your home through renovations or new content purchases (such as artwork, jewelry), notify your insurance professional as soon as possible to ensure you have adequate coverage.

- Know your policy renewal date and allow yourself at least 60 days to review your coverage with your insurance professional.

- Make a list of key details about your home and contents as that information may be needed when calculating the amount of insurance you need.

- If you are in the process of moving and packing up your possessions, it's an ideal time to do a home inventory. This may help you determine the right amount coverage you need. Take pictures or video your possessions since that information can be helpful in the event of a claim.

- Read your policy carefully. Ask questions. Have your insurance representative explain certain exclusions on your policy. Know what isn't covered.

- In the event you have a claim, know the amount of your policy deductible. Talk to your insurance representative about any deductible adjustments and the impact it could have on your policy.

- Shopping for insurance of any kind is always recommended. It's important to compare prices and products finding the right policy that fits your needs. If you find one that fits your needs better then it's best to wait until your existing policy expires before changing companies to avoid any possible midterm cancellation fees.

INSURANCE BUREAU OF CANADA

You can help combat insurance fraud by reporting any suspicious activity. ISTOCKPHOTO/THINKSTOCK

Steer away from insurance fraud

Take the time. Report the crime. That's the message to consumers from Insurance Bureau of Canada (IBC).

IBC's goal is to reduce insurance fraud. According to the Ontario Auto Insurance Anti-Fraud Task Force Final Report, auto insurance fraud in Ontario is estimated to cost consumers up to $1.6 billion per year in insurance premiums. These estimated costs do not include additional health-care, emergency services and court costs.

"Consumers can help by learning about the different types of insurance fraud and then reporting any suspicious activity," says Rick Dubin, IBC's vice-president of investigations. "When someone makes a false or exaggerated claim, honest policyholders pay for it. We all have an interest in reducing insurance fraud."

Five common types of insurance fraud are:

- 1 Unscrupulous auto repair shops that intentionally cause additional damage to a vehicle involved in an accident or bill several different insurers for repairing the same prior damage to a vehicle;

- 2 Medical clinics that ask claimants to sign blank accident benefit forms, then bill insurers for services never provided;

- 3 Individuals who privately sell a stolen vehicle to an unsuspecting consumer after changing the vehicle identification number to hide its true identity;

- 4 Collisions that don't seem to make sense, where a driver intentionally causes a collision with an unsuspecting driver and makes it look as if the innocent driver is at fault for the collision;

- 5 Medical clinics that forge the signatures of legitimate medical practitioners and use their names and college registration numbers without their knowledge or consent on accident benefit forms and then bill insurers for services never provided.

Adam Scott celebrates alongside caddy Steve Williams after making a birdie putt on the second sudden-death playoff hole to defeat Angel Cabrera to win the Masters on Sunday in Augusta, Ga. ANDREW REDINGTON/GETTY IMAGES

Adam rises above Angel at Augusta

Golf. Aussie Scott makes up for British Open meltdown with steely Masters win over Cabrera in sudden death

Adam Scott became the first Australian to win the Masters, beating Angel Cabrera on the second hole of a playoff on a soggy Sunday at Augusta National.

The Masters went to a sudden-death playoff for the second year in a row when Scott and Cabrera made matching birdies on the 72nd hole.

They both made par on the first extra hole, returning to No. 18, before Scott rolled in a 12-footer for birdie to win it.

Scott pumped his fists in the air, screaming toward the grey, darkening sky, and embraced caddy Steve Williams, who was on the bag for 13 of Tiger Woods' 14 major titles.

For Scott, this is the first, making up for his major meltdown at last year's British Open, where he bogeyed the last four holes to lose by a stroke to Ernie Els.

"I found my way today," Scott said.

Scott, playing in the next-to-last group, made a 20-foot putt at 18 and celebrated with Williams as if it were over. Cabrera, in the final group, watched from the fairway knowing he had to hit a brilliant shot.

He did.

Cabrera's ball pulled up three feet from the cup for an easy birdie that sent the two players to the playoff tied at 9-under 279.

"That's how golf is," said Cabrera, who was denied his third major title. "I had some issues during the course but I came back."

Crawford outduels Elliot as Hawks stop Blues

Corey Crawford came away with the shutout in this one, not Brian Elliott.

Chicago's goalie stopped 30 shots and Bryan Bickell and Marian Hossa scored to lead the Blackhawks to a 2-0 win over the St. Louis Blues on Sunday, ending Elliott's bid for a fourth straight shutout.

Elliott had shut out the Red Wings, Predators and Wild in succession on the road for a franchise-record scoreless run of 189 minutes and 23 seconds. His overall shutout string ended at 214 minutes in the second period.

Heat too hot for Bulls in Miami

LeBron James scored 24 points, Dwyane Wade added 22 and the Miami Heat set a franchise record for home wins in a season (36), topping the Chicago Bulls 105-93 on Sunday.

Jays explore shifting Lawrie to second

Jays shortstop Munenori Kawasaki slides safely into second past Royals shortstop Alcides Escobar on Sunday in Kansas City. JAMIE SQUIRE/GETTY IMAGES

With Jose Reyes' injured left ankle exposing their lack of infield depth, the Toronto Blue Jays are experimenting with playing Brett Lawrie at second base as he continues to work his way back to the big leagues from an oblique injury.

Lawrie, who played his first two pro seasons at second in the Milwaukee Brewers farm system, started at the position on Sunday for the Class-A Dunedin Blue Jays.

"Missed playin 2nd!!" Lawrie wrote on Twitter after the game. "Love to have that feel back!!"

If Lawrie looks all right at second, the Jays might use him there when he returns to the club while keeping Jose Bautista at third, general manager Alex Anthopoulos said.

"It's not something we're ready to commit to, it's just more of a chance to do it and this is probably as good a time as any."

Jays fall in Kansas City

Alex Gordon drove home Chris Getz with a single in the ninth inning, and the Kansas City Royals beat the Toronto Blue Jays 3-2 on Sunday.

Wings keep eyes on playoff prize

NHL. Detroit jumps back into the West's top 8 by blanking Preds

Henrik Zetterberg scored in the second period, and the Detroit Red Wings beat the Nashville Predators 3-0 Sunday night for a crucial two points in their chase to extend their streak of playoff berths.

The Red Wings got their first win in four games, the last two shootout losses, and moved into sole possession of eighth in the Western Conference, two points ahead of Dallas and Columbus. Johan Franzen also scored a goal, and Justin Abdelkader added an empty-netter late. Jimmy Howard made 22 saves for his third shutout this season.

Pekka Rinne made 29 saves for Nashville, which lost its sixth straight.

the Red Wings' playoff chase in their final game in Music City as Central Division rivals before realignment. Their final game is April 25 in Detroit in a rivalry where Nashville measured itself against the Original Six team from its inception before beating the Red Wings in the playoffs last year.

The Red Wings hadn't won since April 5. They began the day tied with Dallas and Columbus with 45 points, with the pressure mounting to uphold a tradition featuring 21 consecutive playoff appearances. Howard, who had his 14th career shutout, certainly helped as he stopped 13 shots in the first period before Detroit started firing pucks at Rinne over the final 40 minutes.

Enroth helps Sabres cut through Bolts

Jhonas Enroth stopped 32 shots in helping the Buffalo Sabres keep up their late-season playoff push with a 3-1 win over the slumping Tampa Bay Lightning on Sunday.

Tyler Ennis, with his first goal in 12 games, Jochen Hecht and Kevin Porter scored for Buffalo (18-19-6), which took over sole possession of 10th place in the Eastern Conference — four points behind the eighth-place New York Rangers.

Benoit Pouliot scored for the Lightning, who dropped to 1-4-1 in their past six. Tampa Bay has particularly struggled on the road, where it's winless in four straight (0-3-1) and 1-6-1 in the last eight.

Enroth stopped the first 16 shots he faced before allowing his first goal in two games with 6:30 left in the second period. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

The Sun, Venus and Mars all leave your sign over the coming week, suggesting a major change of emphasis in your life events. Put simply: you've had your fun, now you must find ways to pay for it.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

No matter how much fun you are having at the moment the real fun has hardly begun.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Luck will come your way when you most need it this week, so don't worry about how you are going to pay your way because the universe will provide. You've still got to make some effort though.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Your likes and dislikes will be clear for all to see over the next few days. Don't try to hide them

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

You need to transform the working pattern of your life and the planets will help you in a big way over the next seven days. You don't have to do much yourself – just expect opportunities and act quickly when they arrive.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

There will be several opportunities to indulge your desires this coming week, and you should take advantage of each and every one of them. Life is supposed to be fun, so make having a good time your top priority.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

This could be and should be a fortunate time for you but you must also be careful. There is a tendency to take too much for granted and maybe overextend yourself financially. Remember your Libra sense of balance.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Spend more time with partners and loved ones and relatives. You are so plugged into life and it's many possibilities that you sometimes neglect those who really count. Make it up to them – put them first today.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

You must not, repeat not, push yourself beyond your limits over the next few days.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

There are various times when it all comes together and this is one of them. Over the next few days you will find that your energy peaks and you have more enthusiasm for life in general – and creativity in particular.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

The cosmic emphasis is about to shift to domestic matters but there is still time to do something special in the world.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Get moving quickly today because once you get going you won't want to stop and you will accomplish much more than you expected.
